

ABSTRACT

A transaction rule is used to recognize a set of simulation signals obtained from a design simulation as a transaction. An action associated with the transaction rule is executed to produce an output identifying the transaction.